At the heart of the galaxy's mounting unrest, billions of light-years from Earth, lurks Infiltrator — a shadowy Praloon smuggler who has multiple bounties on his head. Among his collaborators are the dissident droids of Perennis Prime, a colossal android command station hidden in the heart of a turbulent nebula. This station, perched on the edge of a stable wormhole, serves as the perfect launching point for covert operations that threaten to destabilize galactic governments.

In response, Patrol-Force United, a formidable coalition of elite defenders, is dispatched to extinguish these growing shadows of rebellion. With sleek battleships, they hunt down enemy factions who have stirred the galaxy's fragile peace. Yet as the forces of law and order close in, the galaxy is unaware of a more personal and perilous journey unfolding in the quiet reaches of space.

Neruda, a young and curious Mayorfant from the planet of Sakros, has set her sights on the stars. She is on her way to becoming the first of her kind in over three centuries to venture beyond her homeworld's atmosphere in a sleek, refurbished old starship.

But her journey is not meant to be a peaceful one. As Neruda's starship glides past the planet Draxis en-route to a jump point, the Arachtors mistake her unarmed ship for a weapons cargo transport. This fierce arachnid species position their warship beside her ship and intrude aboard without hesitation. Desperate, Neruda ejects in an escape pod. What begins as a forced flight into survival quickly turns into an unexpected odyssey — a journey filled with alien encounters, unexpected twists, and a self-transformation.
